

Bassettbaby Announces Voluntary Crib Recall

BASSETT, Va., Nov 8, 2007 (PrimeNewswire via COMTEX News Network) -- In cooperation with the Consumer Product Safety Commission, Bassettbaby is issuing a voluntary recall on certain Wendy Bellissimo Collection convertible cribs sold exclusively at Babies "R" Us. A joint press release with the CPSC was issued today, November 8, 2007. To see a copy of the joint press release, please go to www.cpsc.gov.

The voluntary recall pertains to 8,900 cribs manufactured under sixteen purchase orders. The cribs were sold between July 2005 and October 2007. The recall does not affect Wendy Bellissimo Collection convertible cribs manufactured under different purchase orders.

Bassettbaby has learned that if the bushings in the top corners of the crib are stripped, they can come loose, creating a gap and posing a potential entrapment and strangulation hazard. Bassettbaby received approximately 85 reports of bushings loosening, with customers requesting replacement arms and hardware. Bassettbaby recently received a single report of a child's hand being pinched, which led to Bassettbaby notifying the CPSC, launching an investigation, and then initiating this voluntary recall.

Consumers will receive a free arm replacement kit, which has been tested and approved by the CPSC. Changes at the factory eliminate the potential issue on all future production.

Bassettbaby values its relationship with Babies "R" Us, and has worked closely with the retailer during this process. While this is a situation that no one wants to have had occur, Bassett has been in the juvenile business for more than 40 years and its paramount concern has been and continues to be child safety.
